MALVERN

Sometime in 1922, because of the need to increase collegiate facilities, the superiors of the Augustinian Order decided to move the secondary school department away from the Villanova College campus. About the same time, the Rosengarten family of Malvern planned to sell part of its holdings located on Warren Avenue and Route 202. Thus fifty years ago from the Augustinian need and the availability of 140 acres of rolling Chester County real estate, Malvern Preparatory School came to be.

Although only two buildings on the estate were usable for school purposes, the present Austin and Albers Halls, they were more than ample in providing classroom and living space for the predominantly boarding student body of nineteen and the original faculty of three Augustinians and the layman.

In the intervening half century, the original buildings have been supplemented by nine others. Tolentine, recently converted from a dormitory to a classroom and office building; Good Counsel, the main classroom building; and Villanova Hall, the intramural gymnasium, were all completed in 1924. When the student body reached the two-hundred mark in 1953, the following buildings appeared in rapid succession: Sullivan Hall, a combined administration, library, cafeteria, laboratory building; in 1953 the present chapel dedicated to our Mother of Good Counsel; and the present large gymnasium and the theater building. In 1961 Dennis Hall, a classroom building and the swimming pool were added.

The spiral of student population has been upward, the latest census showing a student body of three hundred and seventy-five. Following a pattern inaugurated in the early thirties, the day student body has become predominant, until, in 1971, the boarding department was eliminated. The Clerical faculty preponderance has likewise given way until at the present time there are ten Augustinian and eighteen lay teachers.

Rev. Francis L. Dennis, florid and friendly, remained at Malvern as teacher and headmaster for over twenty-five years. Rev. John Coffey, bluff and hearty, whose penchant was public speaking and a drive for scholastic excellence; Rev. Francis Gilligan "the Gill" who annually turned the gym into a theater with unforgettable minstrel shows and later exquisite performances of Victor Herbert.

Special mention should be made of three: Father Hopkins, who introduced the busing system, a factor which has helped to change the school from a boarding to an exclusively day student school; Father Calligan, whose ten year reign saw an impressive addition to the scholastic plant; in addition to the theatre building which came to be largely because of his successful play ventures, he made significant additions in Dennis Hall, a classroom building and the swimming pool, home of the perennial strong Malvern swimming teams. However, the headmaster who has undoubtedly left the greatest imprint on the school's direction was Father Dennis, who held the post from 1942 until 1958. When he took over the office, the school had sixty pupils; when he left, the student population was over two-hundred. A man respected and loved by the students, he gave everyone a sense of importance. He was always one to listen to others' ideas and to adapt them swiftly, if convinced of their validity. He added four new buildings to the school plant. He set the wheels in operation to have the school receive final accreditation from the Middle States Association; he presided over the entrance into the Interacademic Athletic Association.

Athletically, the school, beginning with two intramural teams playing on a recently converted potato patch, now fields ten varsity teams, and five weight and age teams in minor sports. Contributing to this expansion have been such well remembered men as Father William Devine and Father "Ace" Nolan. A standing feature of the Malvern afternoons in the forties and fifties was the figures of Father Devine and/or Father Nolan on a tractor leveling the corn field that was eventually to become the varsity baseball and weight team fields.

For some, the athletic picture holds aged, dimmed pictures of All-Americans Wayne Miller, Olympic quarter-miler Edie O'Brien; for others the amorphous mass of pushing, huffing intramural games on the side of the varsity fields, games presided over by the Augustinian figures of Father "Rocks" Kennedy, Father "Wild Bill" Cullen, Father "Big Daddy" Egan, or the riotous after boarder-study basketball games in the old gym, where skill was at minimum and enthusiasm was at a constant high. In broad relief stands the war time calisthenics to the sergeant-like cadence of an aging but ever willing Father Albers.

Certain teams have peaked during the years, among them the "miracle eleven" of 1942 captained by Art Carey, whose nephew Bob was a co-captain of 1972's unbeaten Interacademic champs; the undefeated 1946 football team; the championship fives of the late fifties under the now legendary Jack Kraft, and the perennially strong track teams that were either on the top or near the top when the "Inter-acs." came along. Malvern Swimming knew its finest of many fine hours when Timmy McKee competed at the Munich Olympics.

The men of the fifties will remember Stanley Jaworowski, who prepared Malvern football, basketball, and baseball teams for entrance into the stern Inter-ac competition; Jimmy Auch, presently a history teacher and sage advisor to the athletic staff, acted as athletic director from 1957 to 1969. None, however, has contributed more than Marshal Halphen, Sr., athletic director and coach of all varsity sports from 1927 until 1942, and member of the athletic council until his death in 1967. Mr. Halphen also served as principal to Malvern's lower school which was phased out in the early forties. With football squads numbering fifteen, basketball squads of seven, and baseball teams where managers had to double as pinch runners, he produced teams that were always competitive with the giants of the preparatory circles. Another figure who has hung around the fringes of Malvern athletics for over thirty-four years is Father William Carney, present teacher of English. He with Father Devine started the age and weight team program; he was a founding member of the Suburban Catholic League, and was chairman of the committee that brought Malvern's entrance into the Inter-ac league.

Scholastically, the school has grown. Every class has made a noticeable contribution to the fields of education, law, medicine, architecture, and government.

Mention of this scholarly train naturally conjures up a gallery of teachers who set them on their ways. Old grads will recall fondly the quiet classical bent of Father Kiley; the rough and honest Father "Ambie" Brennan, prefect of discipline from 1926 to 1936. Later generations will have their favorite memories of such figures as the saintly Father George Krupa, and especially of Father Joseph Grifferty, custodian of rabbits, grower of fresh vegetables, and master story teller. Educated at the Escorial in Spain, Father Grifferty served as interpreter and friend away from home for the legions of Spanish-American students who studied at Malvern. Occupying a special shrine is Father "Charlie" Knapp, romance scholar, master teacher, confidant and friend of every student enrolled at Malvern since 1951. He combines the thoroughness of a scholar with the enthusiasm of a beginner to charm the reluctant and to speed the eager.

Not many, but notable, was the small band of lay teachers, who sprinkled the Malvern faculty when teaching was predominantly a clerical preserve. Apart from the previously mentioned Marshall J. Halphen, none left a mark as indelible as Professor Edward J. Kenny. A man whose accomplishments qualified him for the highest of academic circles, he chose to labor during the early thirties at the preparatory school level. He wrote the words to the alma mater "O Malvern Ever Dear"; he bestowed the name on the earliest literary magazine, The Friar's Lantern, a name culled from his intimate knowledge of English literature, one that has clung to Malvern publications ever since.

Many Malvern graduates have come back to preside at the teacher's rostrum. At present the alumni segment of the teaching staff includes six Malvern graduates. Russ Simone, Ed Ritti, Paul Hornsleth, and Tom Nemeth are comparative newcomers. But Bill Doyle, now head of the English department has lingered for eight years. The dean of the returnees, of course, is Basil Sullivan, who, since 1959, has dispensed his inimitable brand of enthusiasm in teaching government, economics, and sometimes even Latin. During that time he has served as director of bus services, Alumni secretary, and more recently associate principal.

It was, perhaps, in that unique decade, The Sixties, that the lay faculty made its most dramatic impact, for there was a discernible strengthening of academic discipline, course demands, and subjects offered. It would be impossible to select an individual who changed the tenor of tomes, the content of reading lists, the approach to examinations, or the severity of expression, although a Pantheon of names strides behind various splintered lecterns. The group had to it a curious ambivalence: the intelligence of academia and the skill of athletics (not that either is exclusive of the other). There was, the inimitable garrulous Bob Farley (who combined Science and Track); Jack Kraft (whose later fame rested with Villanova Basketball and whose English classes resounded with onomatopoeia); Mike Mayock, Don McBride, and Dan Dougherty (whose skills as teachers were often obscured by their prowess as coaches); Pete Walheim and Larry Palacio (who started a swimming supremacy that continues); G. Nelson Soeder (of whom Father Gilligan said, "I found a gold mine!"); and T. A. McKenna (of whom whatever was said still cannot be published).

Two areas, usually not mentioned in such panoramic sketches because they lie beyond the purview of the strictly scholastic and athletic, need to be noticed. The first section includes the lay trustees, official and unofficial, who concerned themselves in marked ways to build much of what is Malvern. There comes to mind men like Bernie Carey, Harry Brown, Eustace Wolington, Ed Daly, Sr.—all deceased; and Ed Schwartz, Sr., Frank O'Neill, M. O. Lee, 'Bill' McCormick, Allan Ameche, Bill Foley, all who have concerned themselves in substantial measure with Malvern's well-being; the long list of presidents of the Father's and Mother's Club, men and women who have performed well above the normal call; the recently selected Alumni trustees—Bob Quigley, Don O'Neill, and Mike Walsh, who promised to infuse Malvern with the rich flow of young blood and young ideas.

In another section emerge the names of Luke Mohan, Harry McClain, Paddy O'Sullivan, Jimmy Dugan, and Nick DiFillipo, busmen, gardeners, athletic trainers who served as unofficial sources of wisdom and comfort; in the office there was and still is the efficient Miss Dever, and the familiar Miss McCullough, who after some thirty years is still making the wheels go round.

Malvern's fifty years are comprised of optimism beyond measure, dedication beyond understanding, and labor beyond mere human energy.

This statue of Our Lord was erected by Malvern Priory in honor of her sons who served in World War II.

Dedicated and capable are two words that can describe the Malvern faculty. Serving students in the classroom by imparting their great quantity of knowledge, as well as outside by giving freely of their spare time to moderate activities and sports, Malvern's faculty assists greatly in the individual growth of each student.

Besides providing an academic atmosphere that is conducive to learning, a prep school should have certain programs to help its students expand in other areas. Malvern Prep is fortunate to have such a range of activities. At Malvern a student can choose from a score of extra-curricular activities which can help him to discover his own individuality while learning the uniqueness and the potentials of his peers.

Despite a few setbacks the 1972-73 Student Council was considered by many as one of the most active councils in recent years. With the help of Moderator Russ Simone, the council sponsored such projects as the Frosh-Soph Semi-Formal, the Bike and Road Rallies and, of course, the ever-popular Junior-Senior Prom. Another innovation was the revision of the nomination procedure which allowed students aspiring to hold a school office the opportunity to nominate themselves. However these are but a few of the measures accomplished by the Council. It can be said from this years' record that the 1972-73 Student Council was one of the most sincere, hardworking and progressive groups that Malvern has ever seen

Under the presidency of Senior Phil Goetze, the Photography Club continued its useful services to the students and the school. The members constantly kept busy supplying pictures for the newspaper, the yearbook, and other school activities. This year the club experienced several new changes. No longer was the organization at the mercy of the Student Council for financing, but instead the needed funds were taken up by the newspaper and the yearbook. Another noticeable difference was the installation of a newer and better equipped darkroom. With these features and with the hope of having a dedicated staff next year, the Photography Club can look forward to a bright future.

For the first time in recent years, Malvern could boast of an active and productive Dance Committee. President Mike Brown and staff sponsored six mixers all of which were considered highly successful. Local groups such as Patchwork, Gratis, and Dem Bones furnished the music that kept lightfooted Malvernians stepping until the "late hours of night (11:30)." Probably the most notable achievement of this year's Dance Committee was the introduction of two bands appearing simultaneously, which supplied the Prep crowds with hours of constant music.

Certainly no organization more greatly exemplifies the spirit of giving than the Squires. Under the leadership of Joe Donnelly and Fr. Menihane, this year's Squires got off to a faltering start due to a lack of communication on everyone's part. But, with the aid of the Villa Maria Community Service Organization, they soon developed a limited but workable schedule that included a visit to the Pathway School, renovation of St. Rita's Community Center in Phila., two trips to the Phila Zoo, and the annual Squires for a Day which was held at Malvern for underprivileged children from Philadelphia.

Although not fulfilling all of the hopes of the editors, particularly the frequency of publication, the 1973 Cynosure must be considered a success. There were five issues this year, and could easily have been seven if not for some extenuating circumstances.

The articles were consistently well-written, informative, and enjoyable. They covered topics ranging from the usual sports to an investigation of the causes of the boycott. Furthermore, impartiality was present since it was the editors' desire to present stories objectively.

A lack of writers and a regular staff was the primary problem faced this year. Those who wrote, however, wrote copiously and were the mainstay of the paper.

With the bulk of the staff graduating, next year's paper will have to rely on its remaining writers, and recruit new members diligently. With some effort by interested students, this year's success can be continued.

Under the leadership of President Michael Schmelzle and Moderator R. V. Pepino, the Debating Team continued in the persistent quest for success that it has set for itself in recent years. This was quite a feat as no practice debates were possible due to a lack of proctors. The team ended the season with a log of 35-14.

The year started off with Malvern repeating its role as host to the "round-table" discussion of the topic for the year, Federal financing of public schools. Both varsity and novice teams placed well at the district tournament, but failed to make the state championships.

Cardinal Woolsey (Jack Tomarchio) tries to persuade Sir Thomas More (Hugh Liebert) to submit to the king's wishes and sanction his divorce from Queen Catherine.

For its second annual production, the Shakespearean Society, under the guidance of Father Carney, performed A Man For All Seasons by Robert Bolt. James Luken, a Villanova graduate student and teacher, did an excellent job as director and producer.

The play tells the story of St. Thomas More's struggle with his conscience and his king during a time of religious turmoil in England. Hugh Liebert, well-remembered for his portrayal of Marc Antony, played Thomas More with a great deal of skill and finesse. His major opponent, Thomas Cromwell, was finely portrayed by Michael Schmelzle. Comic relief was provided by Joe Cialini as the Common Man. Other important roles were well acted by Bill Walsh (the Duke of Norfolk), Terry Marlowe (Richard Rich), Jack Tomarchio (Cardinal Wolsey), Dan Gallagher (Young Roper), Chris Drennen (Signor Chapuys), and Larry John (Henry VIII). Debi Sinisgallo (Alice More) and Marci Iacobucci (Margaret More), both from Villa Maria, played the female roles.

The technical side of the production was handled by Bill Walsh, Dave Clune, Dan Gallagher and Ted Berry. The cast and several girls from Villa Maria also worked on the stage crew.

An audience of over five-hundred people viewed the play on the evenings of December 1, 2, and 3, and their reaction to the performances was quite favorable. With a great number of the seniors leaving, the future of the Shakespearean Society is yet to be known.

On May 4, 1973, the Junior-Senior Prom was held amid joyous trappings at the Kingsway Inn in Paoli, Pennsylvania. It lasted from 7:00 P M until 1:00 A.M. early Saturday morning, when the music stopped.

A dinner, noted for its unique appearance and consisting of Prime Ribs, was served after the dance floor was finally cleared by diligent SC members.

Genesis, an area group, provided the musical entertainment, which ranged from soft, slow songs to hard rockers of the fifties. There was never a shortage of dancers as couples rocked and bopped the whole night long Seventy Malvernians and their dates were in attendance, the boys dressed in tuxes of a variety of styles, and the girls attired in gorgeous gowns. Needless to say, everyone had an enjoyable time.

An important aspect of this year's Family Day was the great abundance of meat.

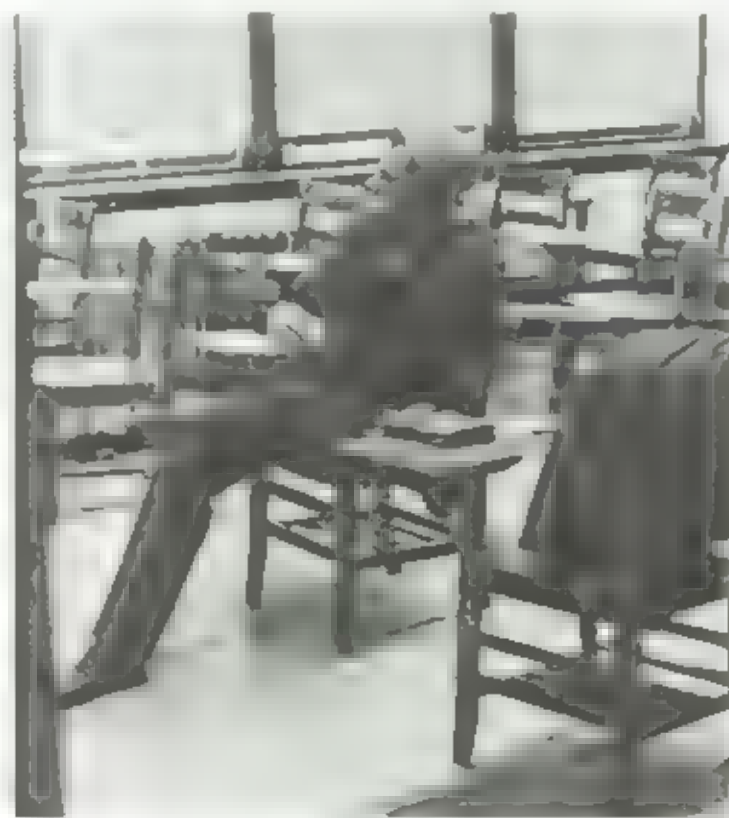

On May 17, 1973, Malvern hosted a 50th Anniversary Ox Roast. The event, a descendant of the Malvern Family Days of yesteryear, was sponsored by the faculty and billed as the official celebration of the Prep's founding in 1923. For the cost of a ten dollar admission fee, the guests were entitled to free steak sandwiches and beer by the keg. Among other attractions that delighted all participants were swimming, horseback riding, volleyball tournaments, games, prizes, and two live rock bands. The administration of the Family Day was handled by the faculty and students alike. By the end of the day, the tired but happy frolicers all agreed that the 50th Anniversary Ox Roast had indeed been a success.

FATHER AND SON

INTRAMURALS

At the outset of the year, the intramural program under Ed Ritti appeared extremely well organized. Each student was in a house team, and was required to participate in the afternoon activities.

After attempts to use the house teams in soccer and touch-football contests, they were finally abandoned in favor of home rooms when basketball started. Mandatory participation had already fallen by the wayside after it was found that no method of enforcement existed.

Since Mr. Ritti had resigned early in the year because of a lack of time, Messrs. John Devine and Jim Auch assumed the reins and ran the ever-popular basketball intramurals. Participation and interest was high, but soon faded after the season when volleyball matches were held.

Two Field Days, one successful, one dampened by rain, relieved the monotony of the class week during the year.

Athletes are a vital and important part of the Malvern atmosphere, for sports take over where academics leave off. Besides building strength and stamina, sports at Malvern teach a boy to have confidence in himself, and to develop a warm comradeship with his fellow teammates. It can be justly said that Malvern athletics play an important part in forming the whole man.

Co-Captain Mike Cappelletti, this year's winner of the Ray Dooney Award for the most valuable player in the Interac, slips by one man just in time to receive a Penn Charter welcoming committee.

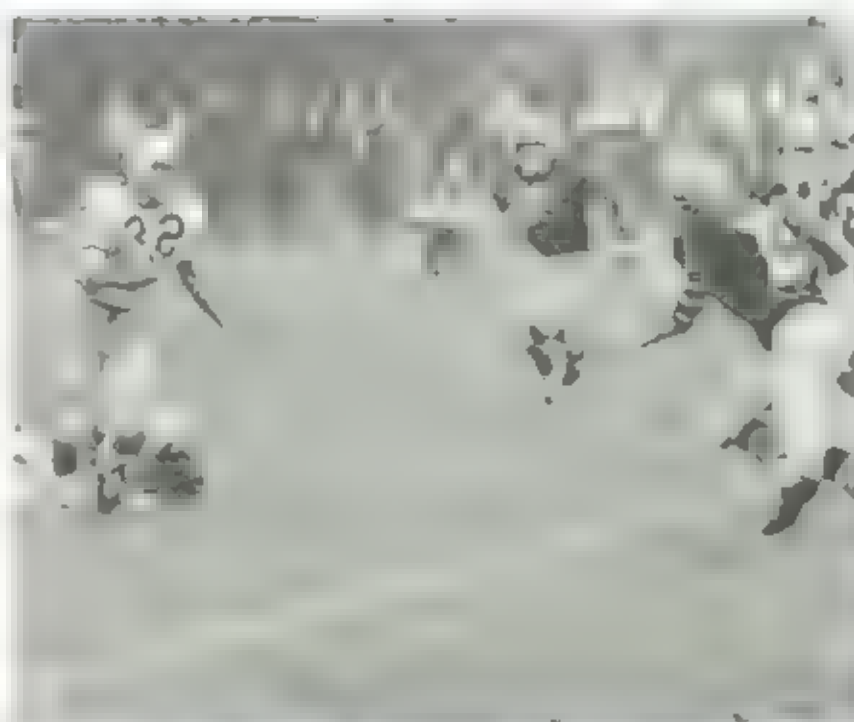

When Malvern's football team began practice in early September, they decided that this season would be a part of Malvern history. Because of this juggernaut determination, the 1972 Friars wrested their first Interac football championship and became the Prep's first undefeated team since 1946.

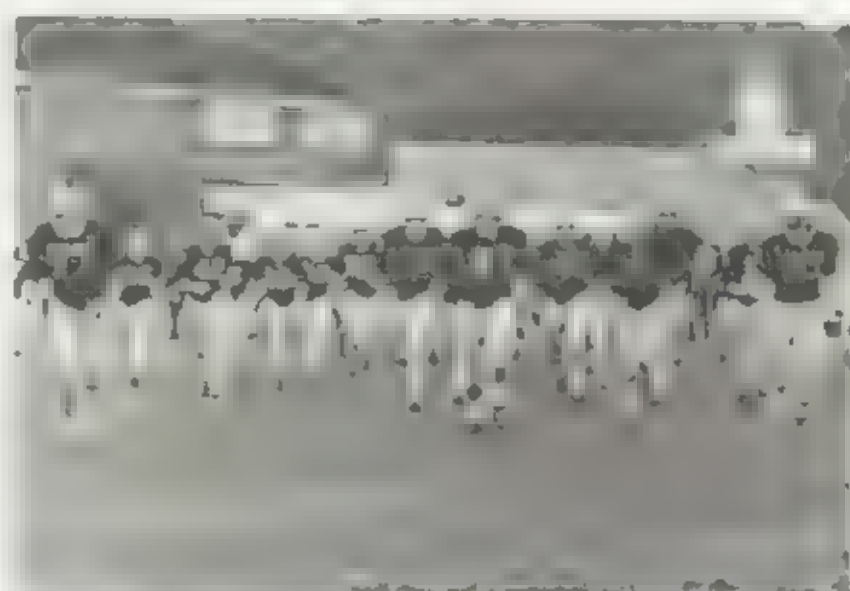

The phenomenal success of the team can be attributed to the fine quality of players. Senior stars Mike Cappelletti, Bob Carey, and Mike Riordan, and Junior Wally Shields were the leaders of an already impressive squad. And like every great team, the Friars had a rugged backbone of players who doggedly fought in every play to do their best for Malvern—particularly seniors Jay Calhoun, Roddy Walsh, John Carullo and John McMahon.

The most important game of the year was played early in the season against Germantown Academy. Most people picked this to be the game that would decide the Interac title. For the seniors it was an ignominious reminder of the time four years ago when Germantown won the final game of the season, and the title had to be shared. However, four long years of frustration came to an end, for there was to be no title sharing this season. A crucial fumble in the last quarter gave the Friars the ball inside the opponent's five yard line, and the ensuing score sealed the Friar's come from behind victory.

This year Malvern could boast of its large contribution to the ranks of the all-Interac team. Mike Cappelletti, who was voted the league's most valuable player, headed the group which included the two Riordan behemoths, Mike and Dan, Bob Carey, Wally Shields, Herbie Beck and Joe Rosati.

There was jubilation at Malvern this year because of the outstanding accomplishments of this magnificent team. But this only goes to show that whenever talent and determination combine in a group of athletes, there is no possible way to stop them.

If one had to pick a word to describe this year's Varsity Basketball Team, that word would have to be 'outstanding.' The 22-2 record carried by the team speaks for itself

The Friars started the season with victories over Catholic League powers Roman and North Catholic. They continued rolling along until they met Woodberry Forrest in the finals of the Hill School Invitational. Woodberry's height advantage was just too much, and the team lost for the first time.

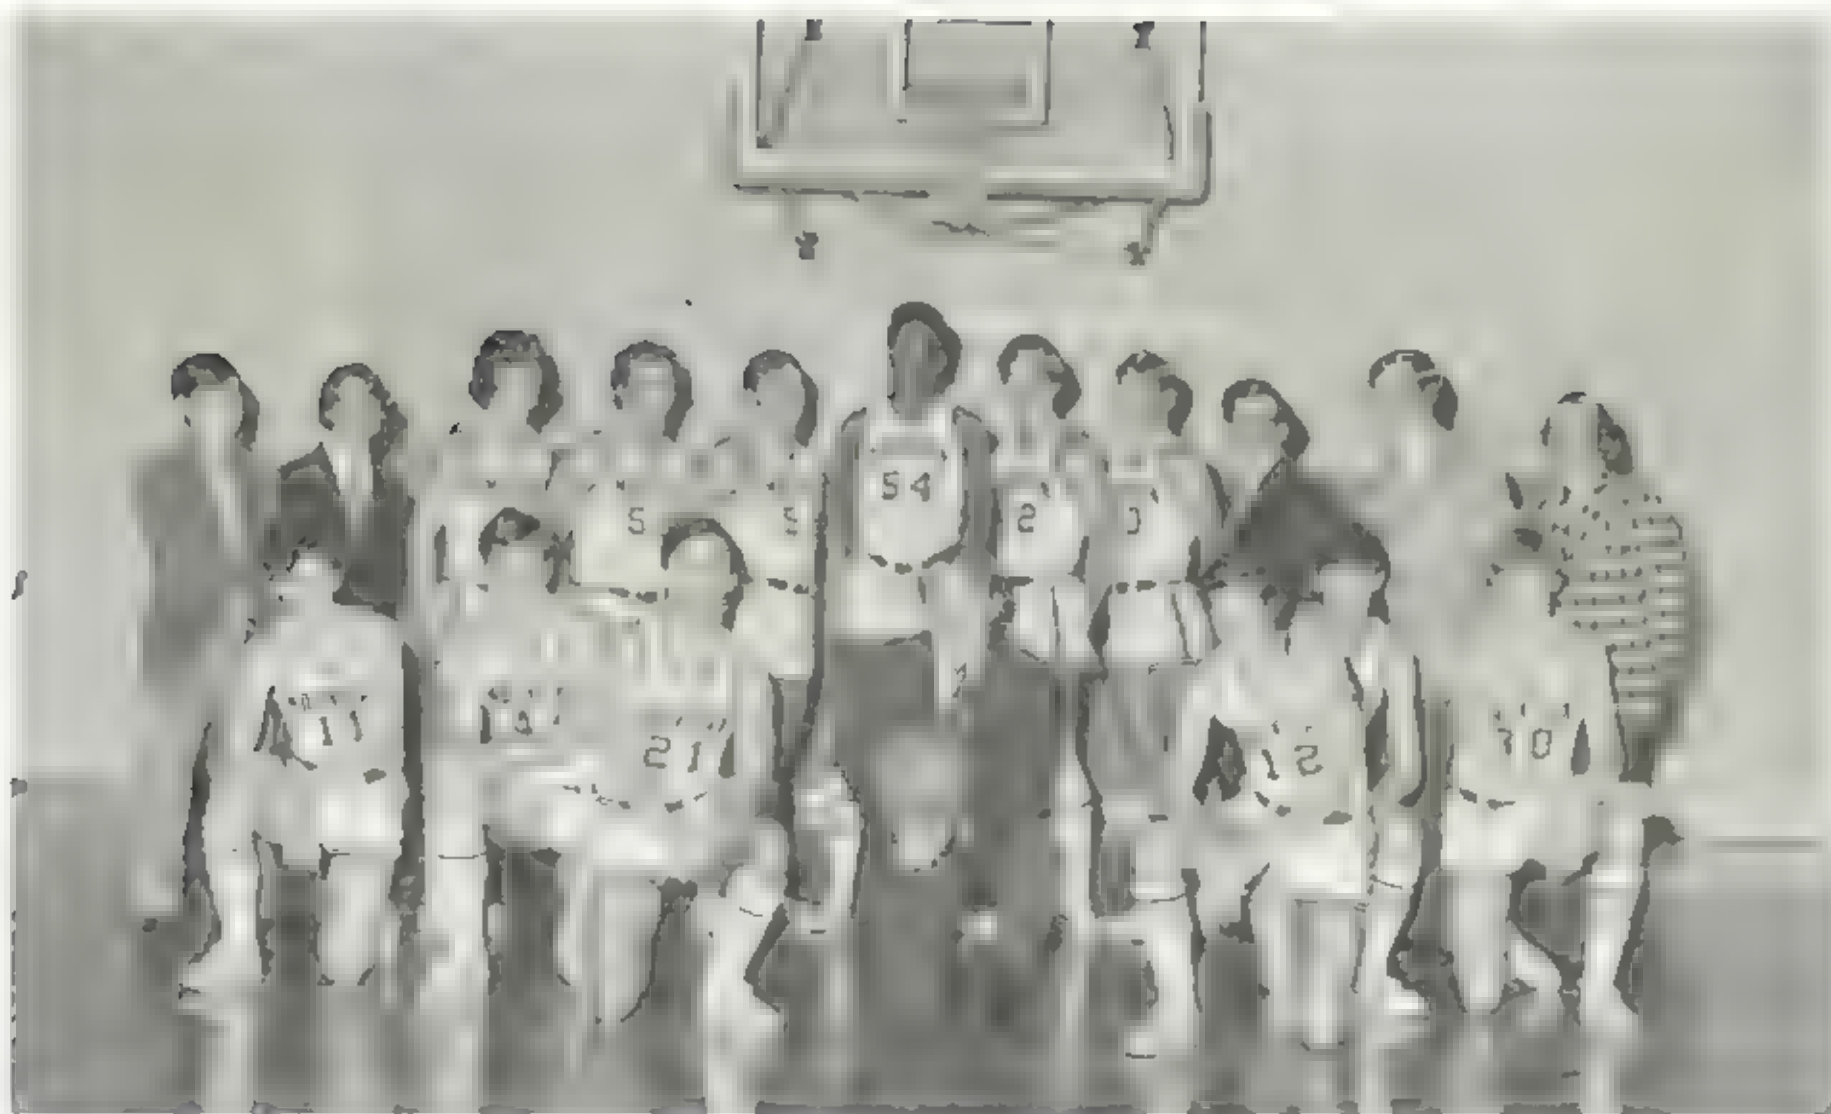

This loss was quickly followed by another: a one-pointer to Bishop McDevitt, the spoiler of the Catholic League. After this defeat, some raised doubts as to just how good the team really was. The death knell was premature, to say the least.

Undaunted, the team moved onward and upward, winning the Archbishop Carroll Christmas Tournament, going undefeated in the Inter-Ac, and easily winning the league crown.

The teams' success occurred even though MVP, high scorer, and No. 1 rebounder Charlie Floyd regularly sat out half the game

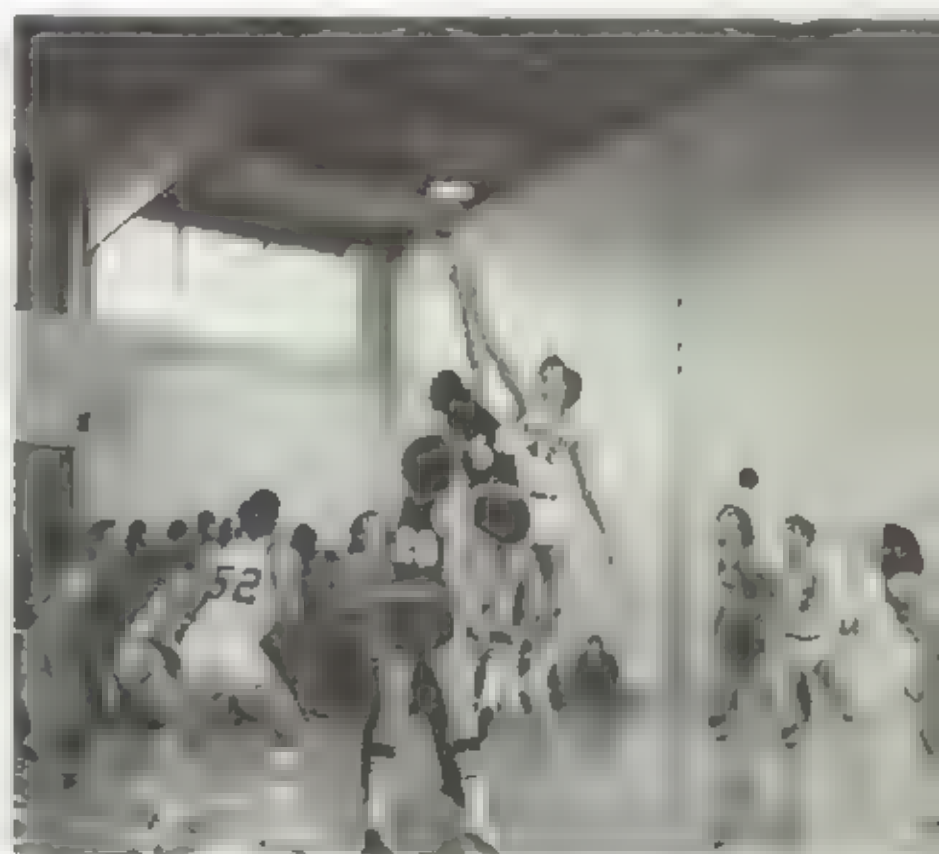

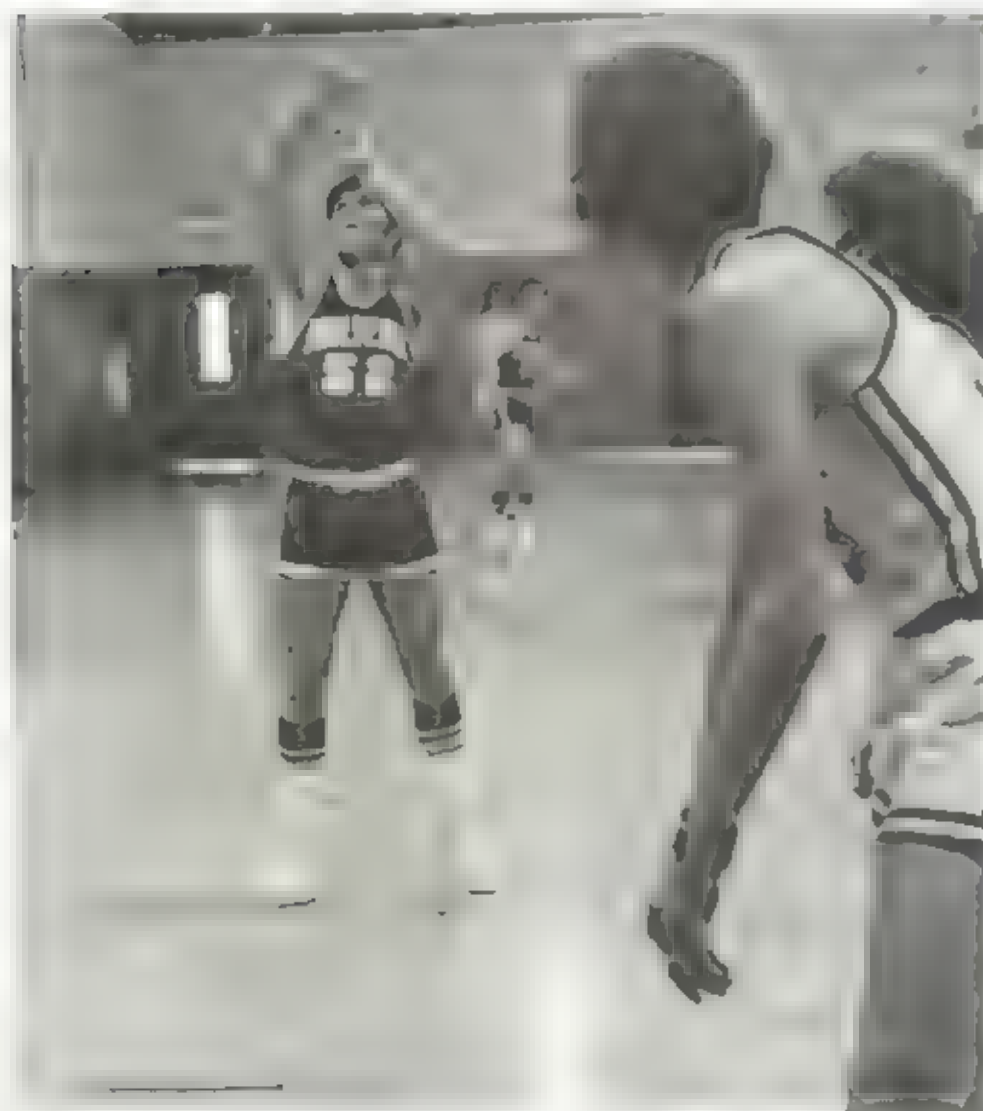

Second scorer Emmet Fitzgerald, Guard Paul McShane, No. 2 rebounder 'Skyman' Jay Calhoun, and Forward Bob Carey have graduated, and all played well in a team effort. They contributed to the great depth of the team, an important factor in its success

With Floyd, as well as starters John Willcox and Wally Shields returning, Malvern must be considered the favorite to repeat as league champions.

ICE HOCKEY

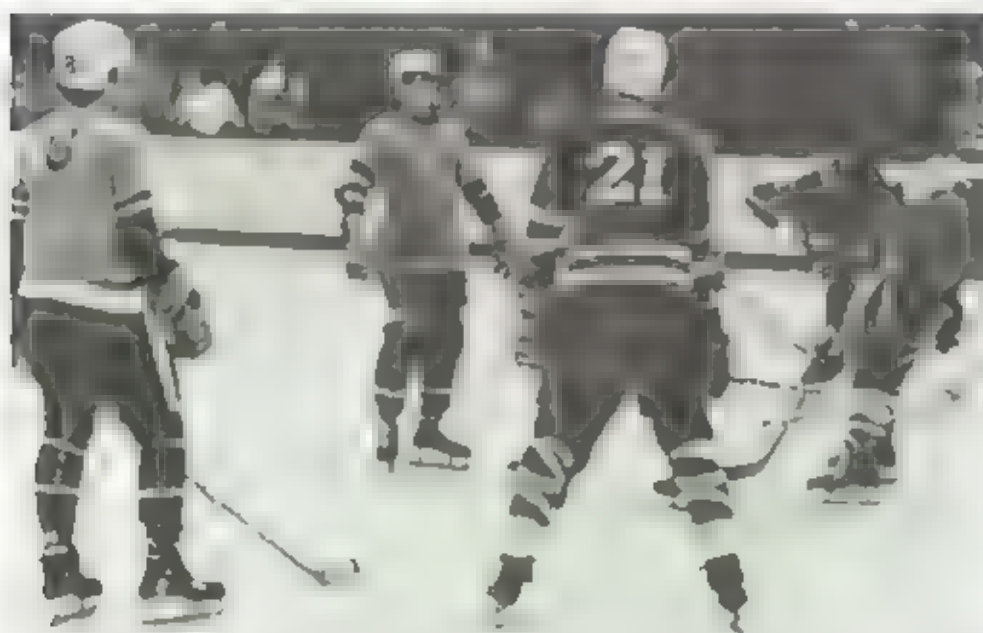

Although the hockey team's season was disappointing (1-12), the members were, and still are, very enthusiastic and optimistic. The squad looked impressive during pre-season and even appeared to be in contention for the championship. However, things went downhill during regular season play as team spirit seemed to decline.

Most Valuable Player and Team Captain Walt Johnson played consistently well, as did stickman Ed Constantini and Drew Lombardi. The year can be termed successful only because of the experience gained for next season. Everyone expects to see better results at the University of Pennsylvania rink next year, especially with the addition of some talented freshmen Malvern's wrestling team may not be able to boast the same success attained by its football, basketball, and swimming teams but it can be proud of its achievements during the 1972-73 campaign. Wrestling more competitive schools, the Friars, under head coach Ted Alex, posted a 7-4 log, a definite improvement over their two previous records of 1-9-1 and 6-3. They placed third in the Inter-Ac standings—breaking a Malvern record—by defeating three of the five teams in the league. Only Haverford and Germantown prevented the team from taking the crown. Another first was Malvern's entry into the National Prep School Tournament at Lehigh University. The Friars placed in the top 25 of 70 teams present and co-captain Butch Bennett advanced to the finals, losing only to the tournament's Most Valuable Wrestler.

RIGHT.

Freshman Paul "Wottle" Celantano, a surprise star for Friars turned in many a hard fought race

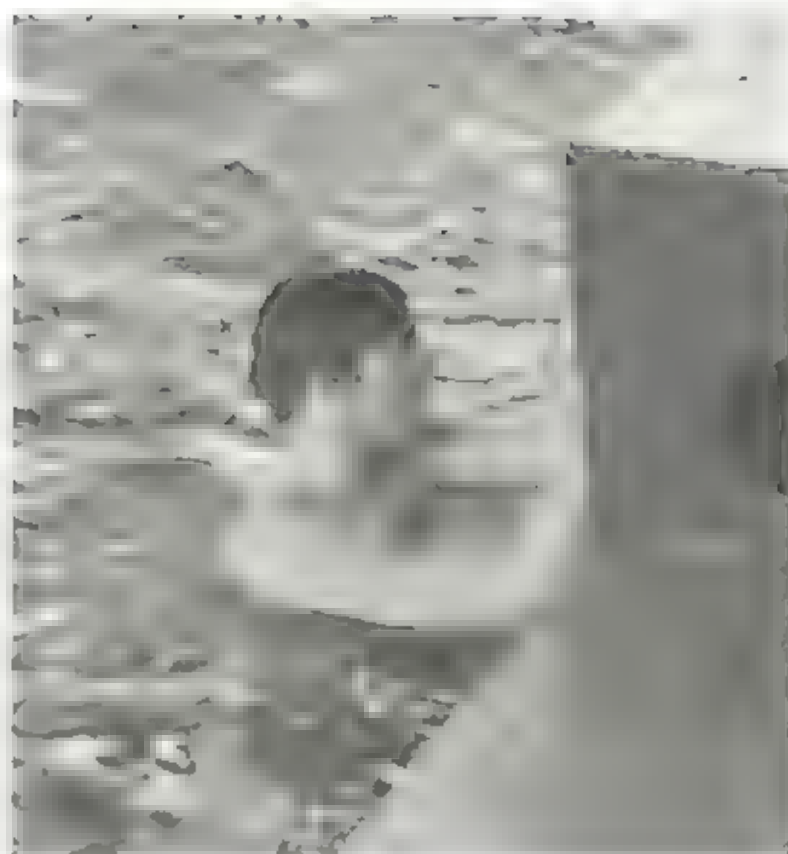

The 1972 Cross Country Team had a successful season, due mainly to the efforts of Senior John Clarke, who broke the course record at Malvern. This string of successes included wins over most of the Inter-Ac schools, including an upset of Haverford—led by Clarke and Paul Celantano, and a narrow win over Penn Charter. Malvern's only Inter-Ac loss was to league champion Episcopal. Due to a minor injury to John Clarke, Malvern experienced a disappointing loss to Shanahan. The team also attended both the Catholic War Veterans, and Meet of Champions, which were held at Belmont. Clarke placed among the top finishers in both of these.

Next year's prospects look good with Celantano and Ray Deathrage of the class of 1976, and 1974 seniors, Jim Matthews, Barry Siegfried, and Eric Shultze forming the veteran core of the team. Coach Black is looking forward to an undefeated Inter-Ac season.

Middle Atlantic Swim Champions Greg Jagenburg and Jim Coleman pose proudly with medals won on a recent trip to West Germany and Holland.

The Swim team finished its season with a 13-0 dual meet record, the Inter-Ac Championship, and two thirds in the National Catholics and the Easterns. Third-year coach Paul Hornsleth is quite pleased, of course, with the team's two-year no-loss record but he is much prouder of the fact that Malvern is now ranked with such Eastern swimming powers as Pine Crest and Lawrenceville.

This year has been unique for a number of reasons. At the beginning of the season, over forty people tried out for the team and dwindled to thirty-seven; but this was still a far cry from the sixteen-man squad of 1970. A junior varsity was begun, but folded after one meet because of the difficulty in finding opponents. Under captains Jeff Delone and Steve McDonald the team expanded its range of opponents to include schools outside the Philadelphia area. Next year the Friars will go even farther by flying to Florida to swim Pine Crest. A Swim-a-Thon was instituted to raise money for trips, awards, and pool repairs.

The highlights of the season were the Mercersburg and Hill meets and Greg Jagenburg's outstanding performances in the two invitationals. Greg set a number of records this year and also earned many honors, including the WIBG Athlete of the Week and Malvern's most valuable swimmer award.

Malvern's 1973 squad of baseball players kept alive the seeming school tradition in regard to this nine-man sport. It is a custom of mediocrity, despite great effort. The team does not lose every time out; in fact, it often wins, particularly at the beginning of the season. When league play starts, however, the victories are few, and the Friars usually remain imbedded in the cellar.

With only Seniors Jay Calhoun, Mike Kelly, Rod Walsh, Jim McCarry and Jack Reynolds graduating, the team should have an experienced nucleus with which to work and improve.

Malvern's Lacrosse Team was highly successful this year posting a 10-5 log, and recording victories over Villanova's JV, Penn Charter, Haverford High, Merion, G.A., and state champs Henderson, in what has been termed the best win of the year.

Several players received individual honors: Mike Lynch, Rich Scott, and Bob Carey were named All-League, while Mike Cappelliti and Tom Howley were declared All-State.

Since the sport is only four years old here at Malvern, the team loses much experience with the graduating seniors, but its ample supply of underclassmen should admirably take up the slack.

MALVERN

1923 • 1973

For the seniors, 1973 is a beginning and an end. Besides being the culmination of their high school career the year 1973 marks the end of a way of life for them. As the members of the senior class prepare to go to college they leave Malvern behind them, but it is the hope of the faculty that the class of '73 will depart with a true sense of the Malvern spirit.

THE CLASS

SENIORS

In their four years at Malvern, the Seniors have grown. They are much bigger, they have learned more, they have demonstrated their prowess on field and court and track. Most of all they have grown as persons. The personality of their class is "strength", and we find each of them a strong man

Among them arose men who dared to present with personal force such plays as Julius Caesar, and A Man For All Seasons. Among them were the athletes who won for Malvern its first unbeaten football season ever. Their numbers count some of the finest scholars the school has produced.

The Class of '73 has been subjected to much in and out of the classroom. They have seen change within the school and within themselves, and they have been docile and obedient through all their social and personal vicissitudes.

What does this mean to the school that now watches them go? It means that in the development of the Class of '73 the school has grown. They are graduated, but much of their growth remains here now within the fiber and spirit of the school within which they blossomed

None may ever say of the Class of '73, "What did they do?". It is all in the record, to stand as long as the school shall exist. No one will ever read their names without being impressed with their strength as a class. They held together, they molded each other, they practiced brotherhood

God be with them! They must still grow, but it is now more to be done on their own. Certainly the strength they showed will stay with them, and to whatever it is that God calls each of them in the future, they will challenge it with the same strength that made them a splendid group of men here at Malvern.

Surely it can be and will be said of them, that they, like Christ, "grew in wisdom, and in age, and in Grace before God and man "

GRADUATION

With typical eclat and Sullivan-esque despatch, the 47th Commencement transported the ferns from the confines of the theatre to the expansiveness of Dougherty Hall. The move afforded the opportunity for not only greater attendance, but also a combined Baccalaureate Mass and graduation ceremony. The change in form, however, in no way affected the substance: the traditional excitement was enhanced by the contemporary approach. The youth of the class speakers, Michael Schmelzle and Joseph Cialini, was complemented by the experience of Reverend Richard D. Breslin, O S A., former Prefect of Students and present Dean of Arts and Sciences at Villanova University.

"One impulse from a vernal wood" will never replace Jack Tomarchio's favorite inspiration. Joe Cialini eventually got off his bench to form the final pages of this book in the office provided with transcendent glare by our peripatetic photographer. Finally, Hugh Liebert contemplates the extensive files of the Worcester campaign.

Yearbooks have a tendency to be redundant in their photographs, historically obvious in their copy, and sophomoric in their humor (unless they have editors of acumen and moderators with nerve). There are unfortunate years in which either the editor fails in his perspicacity or the moderator rejects the startling for the mundane. No book has attempted to inculcate the best available creativity presented to it as The Malvernian.

There has been an emerging (and, hopefully, continuing) tradition of good writing, pertinent observation, and professional advice that has made Malvern's yearbook more of a recorder of the passing scene than that trite phrase ever dreamed of presenting. There is an ancillary tradition extant, however; the continued apathy of the students towards the printed word has caused serious delays in the production of this book (and, we might note, the practical demise of The Friar's Lantern). It behooves the editors to become lachrymose annually in bemoaning the disdain in which lasting creation is held.

The 1973 Fiftieth Anniversary edition did not just happen. It was in the minds of former teachers, alumni, and historians before the 1971 and 1972 tomes were begun (which is another chapter in itself). Some idea of continuity was deemed necessary to hold the past with the present. Since finances made the feasibility of every alumnus receiving his own memorial edition untenable, the decision was to present the historical section in a manner unique. The first sixteen pages of bamboo stock were forwarded in a special cover to the members of the Alumni.

50TH ANNIVERSARY

Speech is civilization itself. The word, even the most contradictory word, preserves contact-it is silence which isolates.
The Magic Mountain-Thomas Mann

There are ghosts of archivists trampling throughout the preceeding pages attempting to consolidate the best of what has been with the best of what is to come.
